About PFT

Private Forests Tasmania (PFT) was established in 1994 as a statutory authority under the Private Forests Act (1994). PFT has a legislated role to facilitate and expand the development of our private forest resource in a manner which is consistent with sound forest and land management practices. PFT is the only government funded authority established in Australia to specifically promote, foster and assist the private forestry sector on forestry matters. We do this mainly through providing information and advice to private growers and their markets, through research, innovation and planning tools, and by providing practical policy advice to our Tasmanian and Australian governments that represents the interests of private forest growers.

Purpose

This directory was first introduced in 2012 as a Primary Wood Processor Directory only with its primary intent to help private forest owners identify potential buyers for their logs and also assist primary wood processors in sourcing logs from the Tasmanian private forest estate.

In 2020, after stakeholder consultation, we have expanded our directory to include a listing of additional forest services to better assist and facilitate commercial forest management in the private forestry sector. The directory has been re-named the ‘Directory of Tasmanian Forestry Services’ (The Directory).

This complimentary publication is a working document and hardcopies are considered uncontrolled. Please refer to PFT’s website for the latest version.

Who is Listed?

This Directory lists forestry service providers over a range of categories and also primary wood processing businesses known to be operating in the State of Tasmania at the time of publication. Their inclusion in this Directory is with written consent and permission only. Not all service providers or processors have provided consent and are therefore not listed, but it is hoped that, over time, more will see the benefit of participating and that others will become aware of this service which is provided free of charge.

Once listed in this Directory, the company will remain unless otherwise requested to be removed.

Acknowledgement

This willing participation of so many of Tasmania’s service providers is gratefully acknowledged. PFT regularly makes requests to our stakeholders for information, or for participation in surveys and we are always appreciative that so many are prepared to give us their valuable time, an example being for the preparation of this directory.

Carbon Project Managers

Carbon Management means examining and focusing on business areas where cost-reduction can be achieved through minimising energy use, raw material consumption and waste generation.

Managing greenhouse gas emissions by growing trees on farms creates carbon storage and can create carbon off-set trading opportunities for farmers. A Carbon Project Manager can assist you in developing a Carbon Project Management Plan.

Forest Practice Officers

A Forest Practices Plan (FPP) is a legal requirement under the Forest Practices Act 1985 if you intend to carry out forestry practices, apart from the exceptions detailed in the Forest Practices Regulations. FPP’s contain prescriptions and a map detailing how the planned forest practices will be conducted.

Landowners may find that they need a FPP for some forest operations. As well as forest management companies being able to prepare FPP’s, they can also be prepared by consulting Forest Practice Officers (FPO’s).

FPO’s are appointed by the Forest Practices Authority (FPA) under section 38 of the Forest Practices Act 1985, and authorised by warrant under s.39 of the Act.

FPO’s (Planning) are delegated powers under s.43 of the Forest Practices Act 1985. These powers include certifying forest practices plans and plan variations.
The FPA provides a register of consulting FPO’s authorised to certify FPP’s on their website www.fpa.tas.gov.au as well as those who have consented to be included in this Directory.

Additional information on the FPA and the legal requirements of a FPP can be found on the PFT website.

Plantation Insurance

Plantation trees are valuable and increase in value over their lifetime. Plantation trees are also susceptible to mortality and damage from natural disturbances such as wildfire. Hence, plantation insurance is available to ensure your plantation is covered not only for its value, but also for potential clean-up costs.

Plantation insurance can provide protection for plantations and timber stacked during harvesting. It can protect you against fire damage, lightning, explosion and windstorms and cover is also available for removal of debris and re-establishment costs.

PFP are currently exporting to 27 Ports in China giving us broad scope to provide reliable export options should demand decrease in a particular region. In terms of price competitiveness, we are focused on providing the best returns over time to resource owners and this competitive position is reflected in the growth of our trading operation in Australia.

PFP are continuously on port in all our operation in Australia with local staff to ensure a smooth logistics result. Since the PFP Group inception in 2002, our payment history as a group is impeccable; we trade over 7 million m3 of logs per year without any loss due to export credit issues. Our team of experienced and committed professionals work across the supply chain in forestry and agriculture. Our services include managing softwood and hardwood plantations; harvesting and marketing of forest and agricultural products from these operations for domestic processing and export; managing for conservation objectives within client owned properties, on areas which are excluded from production and managed primarily for ecosystem services; providing specialist consultancy services to assist in the management of risk (including health and safety, environmental and commercial risk) in the forestry and agriculture industries. Because we do not own land, forests or processing plants and engage third party specialist contracting businesses to prepare sites, harvest and haul crops, our advice is truly independent. PF Olsen Australia prides itself on being able to work with all types of clients to deliver the highest quality outcomes most efficiently and cost effectively. Our commitment to transparent pricing ensures that there are no hidden surprises.

Primary Processors

Who is a Primary Processor?

For the purpose of this Directory, a primary wood processor has been defined as a business that either manufactures a product from previously unprocessed logs or exports unprocessed logs.

Chain of Custody Certification

Forest certification is a process used by business to demonstrate sustainable forest management (SFM) in their production forests. Certification is carried out by independent third parties who regularly audit the performance of a business’s forest operations and management systems against a standard.

Chain of custody certification schemes then enable wood from certified forest areas to be tracked along the length of the value chain. It ultimately extends through to the manufactured and eco-labelled end-product being purchased by the consumer.

There are currently two performance-based certification schemes operating in Australia: the Responsible Wood and the Forest Stewardship Council (FSC) scheme.

PFT indicates those Processors/Companies that have recently provided PFT with evidence of their certification type and currency with a third party certification body. Other Processors/Companies may be certified but are yet to provide PFT with evidence of their accreditation.

Processor Scale

Small = under 15,000 tonne
Medium = 15,000 to 100,000 tonne
Large = Over 100,000 tonne

Additional Information

Private Forests Tasmania’s website includes extensive tools and information for establishing and managing your plantations including selecting species and site, farm shelter, establishment, site preparation, weed control, planting, pruning, thinning and more.
